

identity. The police officer heartily thanked the real estate man for saving him $300,000. He then turned to the real estate man and said: "I am glad to hear that the inspector had been after a piece of property around $300,000. By some means the real estate man had procured the property for $70,000."

Working on this lead, investigators have been looking up real estate transactions in Queens. In tracing the $300,000 transaction they have come across others in which members of the Police Department figure which may become the basis of other investigations.

BECKER ASSAILS WHITMAN'S SPY IN TOMBS CORRIDOR.

The bold and direct methods of Lieut. Charles Becker as a policeman were reflected today in the manner in which he went after a man in the Tombs whom he accuses of lying about him. A disturbed, excited Italian, under sentence and awaiting transfer to Sing Sing, told the District-Attorney yesterday that he had heard Becker say to a policeman, "Keep your mouth shut. You'll be giving us good medals in six months for what we have done."

Becker was aroused when he heard of Italian's statement. During the exercise hour today, the indicted policeman asked another prisoner to point out Hallen. The ex-lawyer was indicted and Becker walked up to him and grabbed him by the arm with a grip like the pressure of a vice.

"My name is Becker," said the policeman. "Why do you make such a statement as you made about me to the District-Attorney, sir."

Hallen did not reply and tried in vain to wrench himself away.

"You know you're lying," persisted Becker. "What was your motive? Who put you up to it?"

Hallen broke away and started down the corridor. Becker followed him and said:

"I want to tell you what I think of you. I think you're the lowest kind of a cur. Under sentence as a crook, you tried to cur, favor for yourself by lying about a man who is in trouble."

As Becker finished Hallen made a dash for his cell, ducked inside and slammed the door. Becker even proceeded to deliver a number of ideas about "stoolpigeons."

"There are five stoolpigeons on this tier," he declared. "They are here under instructions to get certain information. If they can't get it they turn it in anyhow. You run against stoolpigeons in all sorts of guises in the Tombs. Even gossips of the cloth have gone into the business. When a minister of the gospel so far degrades his calling as to enlist as a stoolpigeon I think the limit has been reached."

Becker refused to specify the minister he had in mind. It is known that he has received many letters from ministers in this city, asking him to come to the Tombs and "purge his soul" and throw himself upon the mercy of the District-Attorney. About the only time that Becker comes close to losing his self control is when he gives one of those ministerial counsels.

TOMBS CHAPLAIN RESENTS BECKER'S ACCUSATION.

Becker's remarks about stoolpigeons provoked a reply from the Rev. Sanderson, a Congregational minister, who is one of the Tombs chaplains. Mr. Sanderson felt called upon to make the following declaration:

"I understand that Lieut. Becker complains that a chaplain asked Mr. Becker if she came down to the Tombs to visit her husband in an automobile. I have spoken to Mrs. Becker on some of her visits to the Tombs."

"It is true that I asked her if she came in an automobile, but I did not ask her if she came in her own machine. She repeated this to her husband and he took offense at it. I do not think it necessary to say that I am not a Tombs 'stool pigeon'."

"Do you know the convict Hallen?" Mr. Sanderson was asked.

"I do," he replied. "When I was chaplain at Sing Sing, Hallen, who was serving a term there, acted as my clerk. I did not know anything about Hallen's visit to the District-Attorney yesterday or about what he told the District-Attorney."

Becker's former aides in the raiding of gambling houses, Steinert and White, under indictment, were seen yesterday with their arrest of Jack Zeng, the same leader, were arraigned before Judge Mulqueen today for the purpose of motions on their plea of not guilty. Herbert Moore, their counsel, said he wanted to make a motion for permission to inspect the minutes of the Grand Jury. Judge Mulqueen directed him to put his motion in writing and submit it tomorrow.

Positive denial of the statement that he had been offered the place of Police Commissioner was made today by William J. Flynn of the Secret Service, who said he is wanted by the Aldermanic Committee.

Flynn added that he was not going into the investigation for the purpose of throwing any rocks at the police.

"I have not backed into the District-Attorney's office with a freight car full of scandal," said Mr. Flynn.

In referring to the Aldermanic investigating committee, Mr. Flynn said: "If I accept the employment of the Aldermanic Committee it will be with the distinct agreement that I am to exist principally in studying machinery and organization of the Police Department. I have expressly stipulated that I am not to be employed by the Committee merely to search for scandal."

"I have been interested for many years in seeing the Police Department put on a more efficient basis."

"I have not yet been authoritatively informed from Washington that the Government has relieved me from service to allow me to help the Aldermanic Committee."

LEADER MARCH TO BE ASKED ABOUT BECKER'S STOCK DEALS.

Among those who have been subpoenaed to appear before the Grand Jury tomorrow is James E. March, the Republican district leader, who says he put through some deals in the stock market by which Lieut. Charles Becker won a considerable sum of money. March will be required to tell, under oath, just what the deals were and the amounts realized, and he will also be asked to reveal the identity of the broker or brokers who figured in the transactions.

The District-Attorney anticipates, apparently, that some of the men accused of grafting will attempt to show that they made their search in stock market deals, and in pursuance of that design will produce brokers and accounts to back them up. Stock Exchange houses, in the District-Attorney's opinion, would not jeopardize their standing by putting up any false records, but it would not put it past some outside brokers to produce the accounts of "X, Y, Z" or "A, B, C," and swear that such accounts represented profitable deals in behalf of accused grafters.

William J. Flynn, the Secret Service chief, is to be a witness before the special Grand Jury, which is to be sworn in on Sept. 11 by Justice Goff. Mr. Flynn will be asked to produce data to show the condition in which he left the Police Department in respect of grafting at the time when he retired from the office of Second Deputy Commissioner and was succeeded by George A. Henery.

PROSECUTION OF DIVE OWNERS DIFFICULT UNDER LAW.

By taking the gambling situation as Flynn left it, a witness, Mr. Whitman will be able to figure out what progress was made in suppressing gambling subsequent to Flynn's tenure of office, if there was any progress in that direction. Flynn will produce the records of unsworn warrants and other information of a documentary nature which he submitted to his successor.

The District-Attorney does not anticipate that the list of gambling houses made public today by Commissioner Waldo and the list of disorderly houses to be made public later will furnish him with material sufficient in law to allow of the prosecution of the owners of premises used for gambling and the disorderly purposes. The law takes pretty good care of owners of such places.

"The question of prosecutions to proceed upon information furnished by Commissioner Waldo today," said Mr. Whitman today, "depends upon the diligence imposed by law. To proceed against the owner of premises used for disorderly purposes, it is necessary to prove as follows:

"First—That there has been a conviction of persons using the premises for disorderly purposes.

"Second—That the owner had knowledge of the purpose for which the premises was being used.

"Third—That the owner, in the absence of knowledge as a landlord, was notified by the authorities of the nature of the business carried on in his premises."

"Fourth—That there was continual illegal use of the premises after such notification."

GOFF TO GET MUCH INFORMATION FOR "JOHN DOE" ACTION.

District-Attorney Walman has arranged his work that he will be able to meet Justice Goff at the latter's country home in Millbrook, Dutchess County, to consult about the John Doe Grand Jury proceedings, which are to be inaugurated Sept. 3. At the conference the John Doe campaign will be mapped out.

Mr. Whitman will take with him to Justice Goff's home the 82-page complaint prepared by Assistant District-Attorney De Ford, which will be the basis of all proceedings before the Justice.

It foreshadows the most elaborate investigation of municipal conditions ever attempted in New York. In neither the Lexow nor the Mazet investigations were anything like the preliminary arrangements made that are now under way.

The voluminous complaint deals with every phase of the Rosenwald murder, and the graft charges in connection with it. It goes thoroughly into the alleged alliance between criminals and politicians and lays across on the police situation.

This inquiry will eclipse the Aldermanic investigation. Justice Goff, with the sanction of the Governor and with all the machinery of the courts at his command, will begin by ordering an extraordinary Grand Jury struck from the special panel.

COURT HAS FULL POWERS FOR INQUIRY.

He will have full power to subpoena witnesses, to punish recalcitrant witnesses. The special Grand Jury will sit in session to consider any case that may develop from the evidence. As soon as the Grand Jury is impeached the affidavit prepared on information and belief by Assistant District-Attorney De Ford will be presented with a request for an immediate investigation.

Justice Goff will grant the application and the most important part of the inquiry of a generation will be under way. The District-Attorney does not anticipate any further such inquiry. He will ask the Board of Aldermen and Board of Estimate for what money is needed and there are court precedents that will give the belief that these Boards will have to provide the funds.

In preparing the "information" Mr. De Ford obtained from the Police Department copies of the inspectors' weekly reports for the last six months and a list of suspected gambling places.

A detailed history of the Strong Arm movement in police history and a chronicle of the other squads which have wielded such great power in the department has been demanded also by the prosecutor.

SCREEPER'S CAPTOR THINKS HE HAS LOCATED GUNMEN.

Postmaster Frederick Johnson, of Hot Springs, Ark., who captured Sam Schrepper, appears to be an individual who thinks that, contrary to general belief, lightning does strike twice in the same place. In a letter written by the postmaster of Hot Springs and received today by Assistant District Attorney Rubin, the ex-convict postal official modestly declares that he believes he has located the fugitive "Lefty Louie" and "Gyp the Blood."

At any rate, two men answering the descriptions of the indicted and missing gunmen are at Hot Springs. One of them is left handed. They have been interrogated by the sheriff and insist that they are from Atlanta, Ga. Both are under surveillance.

Mr. Rubin has sent to Mr. Johnson a detailed and accurate description of the two gunmen, and also "Lefty Louie's" missing mark, which was learned from some of his clothing found by the police in a trunk abandoned when he left New York. Further news from Mr. Johnson is anxiously awaited.

MAYOR THANKFUL FOR "THIRTY-TWO" AID IN GRAFT HUNT.

Alan Robinson, Chairman of the Committee of Thirty-two, appointed by the Cooper Union mass-meeting held on Aug. 14, made public a letter from Mayor George B. McClellan in which the Mayor thanked the Mayor for his support of the Committee of Thirty-two in its movement for reform. The Mayor wrote a reply

FLAMES DESTROY $300,000 HOME OF THOMAS HASTINGS

Wealthy Roslyn Colony Fights Blaze, But to no Avail.

A SCARCITY OF WATER. Many Art Treasures and Much Valuable Furniture Burned.

While a great assemblage of millionaires vamps and toasters of less social and financial distinction looked on helplessly and milled round the lawn in shouting confusion, the $300,000 country home of Thomas H. Hastings, the famous architect, at Roslyn, L. I., was burned to the ground early today.

The helplessness of the volunteer fire fighting brigades was due entirely to lack of water. Stanley Mortimer and J. S. Phipps, millionaire neighbors of the Hastings, led their companies of bucket carriers and did some heroic work in carrying out antique furniture, but they were soon driven back by the flames and compelled to look on while the beautiful villa and its art treasures were reduced to ashes.

Mr. Hastings and his family are abroad and there were only a few servants in the house when the blaze started on the second floor. The origin of the fire is a mystery, but it spread with remarkable swiftness and soon enveloped the entire length of the brick villa. All of the servants managed to escape in their night clothes down a rear stairway, but they were unable to save anything.

MANY MILLIONAIRE VAMPS FIGHT FLAMES.

The Hastings estate is in the midst of the Wiesley Hills section, surrounded by the estates of Harry Payne Whitney, J. S. Phipps, Stanley Mortimer and half a dozen other millionaires. The majority of these gentlemen belong to the Highland company of volunteers, and all who were at home turned out at the first alarm of fire, several of them pulling their armor over their silk pajamas.

The Highland company was the first local organization of vamps to arrive on the scene. Some rode in on polo ponies and others came flying across the fields on foot. Last came their engine and hose cart struggling up a steep hill.

Flames were leaping across the dawn-streaked sky as the multitude of volunteer bucket-carriers rushed to the burning villa. Lines were made fast to the only available hydrant and willing arms bent to the pumps, alas! in vain. Only a few drops of water rewarded the struggles of the athletic young men.

Seeing the uselessness of the fire apparatus, Mr. Phipps, Mr. Mortimer and Mr. Whitney, who were on the scene, turned their backs to the burning villa and walked away. The fire was too intense for them to face.

The fire was too intense for them to face. The fire was too intense for them to face. The fire was too intense for them to face.

The fire was too intense for them to face. The fire was too intense for them to face. The fire was too intense for them to face.

The fire was too intense for them to face. The fire was too intense for them to face. The fire was too intense for them to face.

The fire was too intense for them to face. The fire was too intense for them to face. The fire was too intense for them to face.

The fire was too intense for them to face. The fire was too intense for them to face. The fire was too intense for them to face.

The fire was too intense for them to face. The fire was too intense for them to face. The fire was too intense for them to face.

The fire was too intense for them to face. The fire was too intense for them to face. The fire was too intense for them to face.

The fire was too intense for them to face. The fire was too intense for them to face. The fire was too intense for them to face.

The fire was too intense for them to face. The fire was too intense for them to face. The fire was too intense for them to face.

The fire was too intense for them to face. The fire was too intense for them to face. The fire was too intense for them to face.

The fire was too intense for them to face. The fire was too intense for them to face. The fire was too intense for them to face.

The fire was too intense for them to face. The fire was too intense for them to face. The fire was too intense for them to face.

The fire was too intense for them to face. The fire was too intense for them to face. The fire was too intense for them to face.

The fire was too intense for them to face. The fire was too intense for them to face. The fire was too intense for them to face.

The fire was too intense for them to face. The fire was too intense for them to face. The fire was too intense for them to face.

The fire was too intense for them to face. The fire was too intense for them to face. The fire was too intense for them to face.

The fire was too intense for them to face. The fire was too intense for them to face. The fire was too intense for them to face.

The fire was too intense for them to face. The fire was too intense for them to face. The fire was too intense for them to face.

The fire was too intense for them to face. The fire was too intense for them to face. The fire was too intense for them to face.

The fire was too intense for them to face. The fire was too intense for them to face. The fire was too intense for them to face.

RICH ARCHITECT'S WIFE WHOSE $300,000 HOME AT ROSLYN LIES IN ASHES

Flames Drives Many From Studios as Big Stable Burns

Flames Sweep Through Monheimer Bros' Building Across to Gainsborough Apartments.

Paintings Are Saved.

Horses Dash to Street While Fancy Vehicles Are Lost in Ruins.

From four stories in the burning stable of Monheimer Bros., Nos. 223 to 237 West Fifty-eighth street, flames leaped across a ten-foot space in the rear of the fashionable Gainsborough Studios early today, setting awnings ablaze, cracking windows and filling six floors of the seventeen-story apartment with smoke, while the occupants were carried down to the street in elevators.

Thirty-five blooded saddle horses were cut loose in the stable and raced through the fire to the street. The stable was completely burned out, the fancy rigs of many wealthy people were destroyed, and four alarms were turned in before the fire, that did $50,000 damage, was brought under control. Meantime valuable paintings in the apartments of artists in the Gainsborough Studios who are away for the summer were removed and stored in the front of the Studios building, where the heat was not sufficient to damage them.

It was about 4 o'clock when Night Engineer Schoenher of the Gainsborough Studios heard cracking and saw flames leaping from the stable to the rear of the apartment building.

MANY OCCUPANTS ESCAPED BY THE ELEVATOR.

He notified Supt. J. E. Hall of the apartment, who began getting the dozen occupants in the rear to elevators with most of their valuables. A few moments later Policeman Maers of the West Forty-seventh street station turned in an alarm, which brought Battalion Chief King. He at once turned in a second alarm. After turning out the alarm Policeman Maers rushed with his club bringing Patrolmen Walsh and Bunting, and all three entered the stable, which was a roaring mass of flames.

They went from staff to staff cutting the halts of the horses and driving them down the runway. Five horses on the third floor were the last to be saved and only a torrent of water directed from three streams over them allowed the policemen to get the animals out alive. When Chief King arrived the fire had made so much headway that a third and then a fourth alarm was turned in, bringing a great array of apparatus, while a crowd of about 100 poured from nearby houses and hotels.

The danger to the Gainsborough Studios was great, particularly when the awnings went ablaze breaking the windows and sending volumes of smoke and flame into the rear of the building despite the lines of hose dragged through the building and pointed out the windows at the stable, only ten feet away.

ACTING CHIEF KNOCKED SENSELESS BY TIMBER.

There was danger of the walls cracking as streams of water wet them down constantly. Acting Chief Reynolds on the third floor of the stable was advancing a line of hose when he was struck on the head by a falling timber. He was knocked unconscious and had to be carried out by a crowd of men, who took him to a nearby hospital.

The danger to the Gainsborough Studios was great, particularly when the awnings went ablaze breaking the windows and sending volumes of smoke and flame into the rear of the building despite the lines of hose dragged through the building and pointed out the windows at the stable, only ten feet away.

The danger to the Gainsborough Studios was great, particularly when the awnings went ablaze breaking the windows and sending volumes of smoke and flame into the rear of the building despite the lines of hose dragged through the building and pointed out the windows at the stable, only ten feet away.

The danger to the Gainsborough Studios was great, particularly when the awnings went ablaze breaking the windows and sending volumes of smoke and flame into the rear of the building despite the lines of hose dragged through the building and pointed out the windows at the stable, only ten feet away.

The danger to the Gainsborough Studios was great, particularly when the awnings went ablaze breaking the windows and sending volumes of smoke and flame into the rear of the building despite the lines of hose dragged through the building and pointed out the windows at the stable, only ten feet away.

The danger to the Gainsborough Studios was great, particularly when the awnings went ablaze breaking the windows and sending volumes of smoke and flame into the rear of the building despite the lines of hose dragged through the building and pointed out the windows at the stable, only ten feet away.

The danger to the Gainsborough Studios was great, particularly when the awnings went ablaze breaking the windows and sending volumes of smoke and flame into the rear of the building despite the lines of hose dragged through the building and pointed out the windows at the stable, only ten feet away.

The danger to the Gainsborough Studios was great, particularly when the awnings went ablaze breaking the windows and sending volumes of smoke and flame into the rear of the building despite the lines of hose dragged through the building and pointed out the windows at the stable, only ten feet away.

The danger to the Gainsborough Studios was great, particularly when the awnings went ablaze breaking the windows and sending volumes of smoke and flame into the rear of the building despite the lines of hose dragged through the building and pointed out the windows at the stable, only ten feet away.

The danger to the Gainsborough Studios was great, particularly when the awnings went ablaze breaking the windows and sending volumes of smoke and flame into the rear of the building despite the lines of hose dragged through the building and pointed out the windows at the stable, only ten feet away.

The danger to the Gainsborough Studios was great, particularly when the awnings went ablaze breaking the windows and sending volumes of smoke and flame into the rear of the building despite the lines of hose dragged through the building and pointed out the windows at the stable, only ten feet away.

The danger to the Gainsborough Studios was great, particularly when the awnings went ablaze breaking the windows and sending volumes of smoke and flame into the rear of the building despite the lines of hose dragged through the building and pointed out the windows at the stable, only ten feet away.

The danger to the Gainsborough Studios was great, particularly when the awnings went ablaze breaking the windows and sending volumes of smoke and flame into the rear of the building despite the lines of hose dragged through the building and pointed out the windows at the stable, only ten feet away.

The danger to the Gainsborough Studios was great, particularly when the awnings went ablaze breaking the windows and sending volumes of smoke and flame into the rear of the building despite the lines of hose dragged through the building and pointed out the windows at the stable, only ten feet away.

The danger to the Gainsborough Studios was great, particularly when the awnings went ablaze breaking the windows and sending volumes of smoke and flame into the rear of the building despite the lines of hose dragged through the building and pointed out the windows at the stable, only ten feet away.

The danger to the Gainsborough Studios was great, particularly when the awnings went ablaze breaking the windows and sending volumes of smoke and flame into the rear of the building despite the lines of hose dragged through the building and pointed out the windows at the stable, only ten feet away.

The danger to the Gainsborough Studios was great, particularly when the awnings went ablaze breaking the windows and sending volumes of smoke and flame into the rear of the building despite the lines of hose dragged through the building and pointed out the windows at the stable, only ten feet away.

The danger to the Gainsborough Studios was great, particularly when the awnings went ablaze breaking the windows and sending volumes of smoke and flame into the rear of the building despite the lines of hose dragged through the building and pointed out the windows at the stable, only ten feet away.

The danger to the Gainsborough Studios was great, particularly when the awnings went ablaze breaking the windows and sending volumes of smoke and flame into the rear of the building despite the lines of hose dragged through the building and pointed out the windows at the stable, only ten feet away.

FIRE DRIVES MANY FROM STUDIOS AS BIG STABLE BURNS

Flames Sweep Through Monheimer Bros' Building Across to Gainsborough Apartments.

Paintings Are Saved.

Horses Dash to Street While Fancy Vehicles Are Lost in Ruins.

From four stories in the burning stable of Monheimer Bros., Nos. 223 to 237 West Fifty-eighth street, flames leaped across a ten-foot space in the rear of the fashionable Gainsborough Studios early today, setting awnings ablaze, cracking windows and filling six floors of the seventeen-story apartment with smoke, while the occupants were carried down to the street in elevators.

Thirty-five blooded saddle horses were cut loose in the stable and raced through the fire to the street. The stable was completely burned out, the fancy rigs of many wealthy people were destroyed, and four alarms were turned in before the fire, that did $50,000 damage, was brought under control. Meantime valuable paintings in the apartments of artists in the Gainsborough Studios who are away for the summer were removed and stored in the front of the Studios building, where the heat was not sufficient to damage them.

It was about 4 o'clock when Night Engineer Schoenher of the Gainsborough Studios heard cracking and saw flames leaping from the stable to the rear of the apartment building.

MANY OCCUPANTS ESCAPED BY THE ELEVATOR.

He notified Supt. J. E. Hall of the apartment, who began getting the dozen occupants in the rear to elevators with most of their valuables. A few moments later Policeman Maers of the West Forty-seventh street station turned in an alarm, which brought Battalion Chief King. He at once turned in a second alarm. After turning out the alarm Policeman Maers rushed with his club bringing Patrolmen Walsh and Bunting, and all three entered the stable, which was a roaring mass of flames.

They went from staff to staff cutting the halts of the horses and driving them down the runway. Five horses on the third floor were the last to be saved and only a torrent of water directed from three streams over them allowed the policemen to get the animals out alive. When Chief King arrived the fire had made so much headway that a third and then a fourth alarm was turned in, bringing a great array of apparatus, while a crowd of about 100 poured from nearby houses and hotels.

The danger to the Gainsborough Studios was great, particularly when the awnings went ablaze breaking the windows and sending volumes of smoke and flame into the rear of the building despite the lines of hose dragged through the building and pointed out the windows at the stable, only ten feet away.

ACTING CHIEF KNOCKED SENSELESS BY TIMBER.

There was danger of the walls cracking as streams of water wet them down constantly. Acting Chief Reynolds on the third floor of the stable was advancing a line of hose when he was struck on the head by a falling timber. He was knocked unconscious and had to be carried out by a crowd of men, who took him to a nearby hospital.

The danger to the Gainsborough Studios was great, particularly when the awnings went ablaze breaking the windows and sending volumes of smoke and flame into the rear of the building despite the lines of hose dragged through the building and pointed out the windows at the stable, only ten feet away.

The danger to the Gainsborough Studios was great, particularly when the awnings went ablaze breaking the windows and sending volumes of smoke and flame into the rear of the building despite the lines of hose dragged through the building and pointed out the windows at the stable, only ten feet away.

The danger to the Gainsborough Studios was great, particularly when the awnings went ablaze breaking the windows and sending volumes of smoke and flame into the rear of the building despite the lines of hose dragged through the building and pointed out the windows at the stable, only ten feet away.

The danger to the Gainsborough Studios was great, particularly when the awnings went ablaze breaking the windows and sending volumes of smoke and flame into the rear of the building despite the lines of hose dragged through the building and pointed out the windows at the stable, only ten feet away.

The danger to the Gainsborough Studios was great, particularly when the awnings went ablaze breaking the windows and sending volumes of smoke and flame into the rear of the building despite the lines of hose dragged through the building and pointed out the windows at the stable, only ten feet away.

The danger to the Gainsborough Studios was great, particularly when the awnings went ablaze breaking the windows and sending volumes of smoke and flame into the rear of the building despite the lines of hose dragged through the building and pointed out the windows at the stable, only ten feet away.

The danger to the Gainsborough Studios was great, particularly when the awnings went ablaze breaking the windows and sending volumes of smoke and flame into the rear of the building despite the lines of hose dragged through the building and pointed out the windows at the stable, only ten feet away.

The danger to the Gainsborough Studios was great, particularly when the awnings went ablaze breaking the windows and sending volumes of smoke and flame into the rear of the building despite the lines of hose dragged through the building and pointed out the windows at the stable, only ten feet away.

The danger to the Gainsborough Studios was great, particularly when the awnings went ablaze breaking the windows and sending volumes of smoke and flame into the rear of the building despite the lines of hose dragged through the building and pointed out the windows at the stable, only ten feet away.

The danger to the Gainsborough Studios was great, particularly when the awnings went ablaze breaking the windows and sending volumes of smoke and flame into the rear of the building despite the lines of hose dragged through the building and pointed out the windows at the stable, only ten feet away.

The danger to the Gainsborough Studios was great, particularly when the awnings went ablaze breaking the windows and sending volumes of smoke and flame into the rear of the building despite the lines of hose dragged through the building and pointed out the windows at the stable, only ten feet away.

The danger to the Gainsborough Studios was great, particularly when the awnings went ablaze breaking the windows and sending volumes of smoke and flame into the rear of the building despite the lines of hose dragged through the building and pointed out the windows at the stable, only ten feet away.

The danger to the Gainsborough Studios was great, particularly when the awnings went ablaze breaking the windows and sending volumes of smoke and flame into the rear of the building despite the lines of hose dragged through the building and pointed out the windows at the stable, only ten feet away.

The danger to the Gainsborough Studios was great, particularly when the awnings went ablaze breaking the windows and sending volumes of smoke and flame into the rear of the building despite the lines of hose dragged through the building and pointed out the windows at the stable, only ten feet away.

The danger to the Gainsborough Studios was great, particularly when the awnings went ablaze breaking the windows and sending volumes of smoke and flame into the rear of the building despite the lines of hose dragged through the building and pointed out the windows at the stable, only ten feet away.

The danger to the Gainsborough Studios was great, particularly when the awnings went ablaze breaking the windows and sending volumes of smoke and flame into the rear of the building despite the lines of hose dragged through the building and pointed out the windows at the stable, only ten feet away.

The danger to the Gainsborough